

beyond the year 2000.

Constraining growth in the electric utility industry will be difficult, given the growth in state energy usage and the need to develop new power sources to meet the needs of the nation's rural electrics.

REC is composed of 28 distributions cooperatives, serving more than 246,000 member-consumers.

It operates in one departmental

REC's 10%

growth

in 1993

is projected

to continue

throughout the decade.

REC's

load

management

system,

now in

its fifth

year,

utilizing radio-

controlled

switches on 65,000 electric meters,

is being expanded

to 100,000

by 1995.

REC's

load

management

system,

now in

its fifth

year,

utilizing radio-

controlled

switches on 65,000 elec-

tric meters,

is being expanded

to 100,000

by 1995.

REC's

load management

system,

now in

its fifth

year,

utilizing radio-

controlled

switches on 65,000 elec-

tric meters,

is being expanded

to 100,000

by 1995.

REC's

load

management

system,

now in

its fifth

year,

utilizing radio-

controlled

switches on 65,000 elec-

tric meters,

is being expanded

to 100,000

by 1995.

REC's

load

management

system,

now in

its fifth

year,

utilizing radio-

controlled

switches on 65,000 elec-

tric meters,

is being expanded

to 100,000

by 1995.

REC's

load

management

system,

now in

its fifth

year,

utilizing radio-

controlled

switches on 65,000 elec-

tric meters,

is being expanded

to 100,000

by 1995.

Buckeye Power, Inc. itself continues to grow rapidly, adding annually to NERC's

list of registered generators, and has recently been awarded a license to generate power at the

Black Rock Generating Station in Nevada.

Black Rock is the largest single-unit coal-fired generator in the world, and will produce enough electricity to power about 1.5 million homes in the United States.

The company is also expanding its interest in extend well beyond the year 2000.

Constraining growth in

the electric utility industry will be difficult, given the growth in state energy

usage and the need to develop new power sources to meet the needs of the nation's rural electrics.

REC is composed of 28 distribu-

tions cooperatives, serving more

than 246,000 member-consumers.

It operates in one departmental

REC's 10% growth in 1993 is projected to continue throughout the decade.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

REC's load management system, now in its fifth year, utilizing radio-controlled switches on 65,000 electric meters, is being expanded to 100,000 by 1995.

(Continued on page 9)

WaterFurnace geothermal heat pumps, which, after eight months to serve 40 heating-ventilatingthe Co-ops running as a true business," he said. "We were able to set legislation in place that pro-

"There isn't a lot of profit in serving," he said. "It's a service of the state."